Improving the dining experience

Bringing relationship-centered dining into focus = Best Practice

Food service delivery should be focused on each individual and as hospitable as possible. How? By allowing the residents to have a daily voice as to what is served before the meal is plated in front of them. In the dining room, down hallways, on the patio...really, anywhere they would like to eat!

Massive reduction in food waste & major cost savings

Serving only what residents like

There is less food waste because residents are served only the foods they desire, at point-of-service.

Almost zero waste

You have more control on your food costs and waste is nearly eliminated.

Better control on portions

By interacting one on one and fulfilling the consumers needs; they take control of their portions, which in turn drives your production reports.

It's not just a cart. It's a system developed through many years of experience.

Implementing a new and improved meal service delivery can sometimes feel difficult, especially for staff that have followed the same procedure for the same way for many years. Change can have its challenges but with Suzanne's knowledge and assistance, operators are helped navigate through this period in a straight-forward, common-sense method. Each SuzyQ cart purchase comes with a personalized phone call from Suzanne, a staff education manual full of photos, stories, examples, implementation steps, and access to a webinar class lead by her. Suzanne is also available for teleconference or on-camera meetings when needed to help the community be successful with this mobile meal service. Support is readily available to assist with your implementation of person-centered dining, by a Registered Dietitian who has personally implemented SuzyQ carts in numerous communities herself, and walked beside 1,000's of appreciative customers.
